COMMUNITY COLLEGE CLARK COUNTY

Beginning Feb. 26, Clark County Community College will offer several classes for the first time in Henderson, Dr. R. Stephen Nicholson has announced.

The college's executive vice president said the new classes will meet in the Henderson Community Center and extend over 14 instructional weeks, ending just prior to the college's summer session.

Dr. Nicholson said the newly scheduled classes in Henderson are indicative of the college's intent to make continuing education accessible to all who seek it.

"An important function of community colleges today," he noted, "is the provision of educational opportunity at times best suited for students and in locations readily available to them."

Classes to be offered include basic math, introduction to composition, English as a second language, conversational Spanish, family psychology, child psychology, human growth and development, elementary accounting, introduction to sociology, needlepoint, and drawing.

The basic math and introduction to composition classes offer preparation for the GED high school equivalency exam. The GED exams, administered by Mrs. Lurena Brown at the college, will be available in April and May during this session.

Registration for the new Henderson classes has been scheduled at the Community Center for Saturday, Feb. 24, 9-12 in the morning and Monday, Feb. 26, 5-9 in the evening.

In addition, registration at the community college, 737 N. Main St., will be available Feb. 19-23 from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. each day.

All Henderson classes have been scheduled for evening meetings. With the exception of family psychology, and eight week, two-credit course, each new class carries three units of college credit.
