

ONEITA, from page 3

First, boycott Oneita products. Oneita manufacturers men's and boy's underwear. They are not sold under the Oneita label, but under the brand name of the store in which they are sold. Most Oneita garments are sold in large chain stores: Kresge, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and J. C. Penney. To honor the boycott simply do not buy underwear from any of these four stores.

Second, march in informational picket lines that may be established in front of these stores in your community.

Third, write these department stores and tell them of your outrage that they are helping to subsidize what comes close to being slave labor, and of your support for the boycott. Tell them it is a disgrace that they are profiting from subhuman wage made goods.

The Oneita strike is one of the most important as the New South has come about largely because of the readiness of black working people to free themselves of centuries old discrimination. Discrimination, of course, take many forms, and what is going on in the mills of South Carolina is one of its most virulent forms. A victory for the Textile Workers Union and the black women it represents would mark an important chapter in the continued remaking of the South.

rowers would determine the size, amount and terms of the loan; a new federal unit should be established to administer loans, but government subsidy should be limited to necessary costs on insuring loans against default. There should be no maximum level of borrowing, and loans should be repayable over the entire working lifetime of the student.
SUPPLEMENTARY SERVICES... Provision of regular payments (vouchers) of $35 per month to students who are aided under the grant program. These vouchers would be used to purchase compensatory and supplementary services. ESTIMATED COST ABOUT $553 MILLION
