Better Job, Promotions And Personal Satisfaction

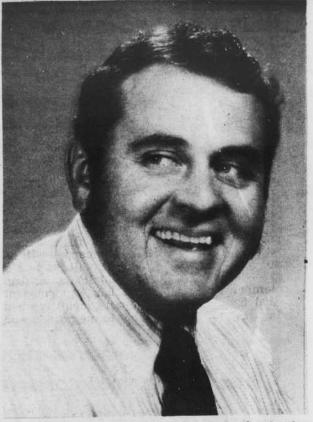

The Nevada Department of Education awarded 840 high school equivalency certificates during the calendar year 1972. The issuance of these certificates was based on scores achieved on the Tests of General Educational Development (GED) distributed by the American Council on Education. According to Merlin Anderson, Administrator of the State Program, 828 certificates were received by Nevada residents as a result of successful completion of the battery of tests which are administered at 10 official GED Centers throughout the State, while 12 certificates were issued to active duty military personnel or veterans who had taken the examination through the United States Armed Forces Institute. These state certificates, issued to adults who have not completed a regular program of instruction at the high school level, are equivalent to high school diplomas.

The total number of adults tested in the State was 1,141, but 27 percent failed to meet the minimum standards as established by the State Department of Education. The average age of those tested was 25.5; the average number of years of formal schooling completed was 10.2. When asked their reasons for taking the tests, 39 percent said they wanted to qualify for education or training beyond high school. The others said they wished to earn a high school equivalency certificate in order to qualify for better jobs, to gain promotion in their work, or for personal satisfaction.

The national statistics, compiled and published by the GED Testing Service in Washington, D.C., show that during 1972, 430,346 individuals were tested at 1,997 Official GED Centers in the fifty states, District of Columbia, American Samoa, Puerto Rico, Guam, Canal Zone, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and four Canadian provinces - Manitoba, Nova Scotia, Prince, Edward Island, and Saskatchewan. Of this total, 32.6 percent failed to meet individual state requirements. The average years of schooling was 9.75; the average age was 27.27, and 44.3 percent indicated they planned further study or training.
