words of the late president, John F. Kennedy, who, in his inaugural address, implored Americans to "Ask not what the country can do for me, but what can I do for my country."

The Black community of Las Vegas can rise to a position of enviable strength and effectiveness, destroying forever the efforts of those who would keep its residents in their "place" if every member of the community could be made to realize the very real danger to a weak community, and say, "It matters less what the community can do for me, than it does what I can do for my community."

ultimate goal is to eliminate individual and institutional racism in the Navy through race relations training and racial awareness into the ongoing process of education and training in the Navy. "The establishment of the Race Relations School is one more important step in creating a unified Navy--regardless of race, creed, color or national origin--in which each naval member is judged solely on diligence and performance," said Rear Admiral C.F. Rauch, Jr., Assistant Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Human Goals.

The Navy currently requires a minimum of 18 hours of race relations education training annually for all personnel. Courses are taught at all entry points into the Navy for both officer and enlisted personnel and at most formal Navy schools.

Tie Down Mobile Homes

The Nevada Mobile Home and Travel Trailer Advisory Commission met on Tuesday, November 13, 1973 and formulated regulations relating to tie-downs for mobilehomes. These regulations provide for anchoring of every mobile home which is installed after January 1, 1974, except double wide mobile homes. With respect to mobile homes manufactured prior to November 9, 1973, the method of fastening the unit to ground anchors is left to the option of the mobile home owner. With respect to mobile homes manufactured after November 9, 1973, certain requirements for tie-down apparatus have to be met by the manufacturer of the mobile home.

The Commission and the Nevada State Fire Marshal in a joint statement issued following the meeting stated that:

"... with the adoption of these regulations Nevada has taken a step toward making mobile homes a safer place to live..."
