

Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger has announced that the President has appointed Brigadier General Cunningham C. Bryant as Commanding General, District of Columbia National Guard, succeeding Major General Charles L. Southward, who retired August 2, 1974. The appointment is retroactive to August 9.

General Bryant's appointment under Section 39-201, District of Columbia Code. Includes promotion to the D.C. Militia grade of major general. Federal recognition of his promotion to major general is subject to Senate confirmation.

General Bryant has served as the Adjutant General of the District of Columbia National Guard since July 1968. He became the first federally recognized black general officer in the National Guard when he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general in July 1971.
