Audrey May from Clark High School and Sheila Carpenter from Western High School have been chosen as Durisi Reporters of the Year.

Durisi Reporters are students selected by the principal of their schools to write specifically about minority students and the progress that is being made by the students of their individual

Working in cooperation with the VOICE, these students occasionally write articles for the VOICE as well as for their own school news-

Hence, the VOICE presents this award of $25.00 bonds for accomplishment to these students and applaud them on a job well done.

Besides receiving a bond from the VOICE, Sheila (left) and Audrey will be awarded a trophy from the Clark County School District on Human Relation's Office.

Employment Agencies Can 'Do a Job' on You

By Virginia Knauer Special Assistant to the President and Director Office of Consumer Affairs Department of Health, Education and Welfare

Looking for a job? Calling employment agencies? You could be out more than just a job if you don't know how to judge an employment agency and how to deal with it.

Unfortunately, there are some unscrupulous employment agencies that take advantage of the jobless instead of helping them.

Many agencies are ethical and legitimate companies. But my column today is about the agencies that "do a job" on you instead of getting a job for you.

Unless you select an employment agency carefully, you may end up with a lot of aggravation and the loss of your time and money. To learn the differences between a good employ-ment agency and a bad one, follow these two words of advice: COMPARISON SHOP.

o Compare fees. All employment agencies (except those operated by state governments) charge a fee for placing you in a job. Agencies charge anywhere from 5 percent to 20 percent of a year's wages. Be careful about paying more than 9 percent, which would be about one month's wages. one month's wages.

one month's wages.

• Compare payment plans. Obviously, if you've been out of work, you probably can't afford to pay all of your first month's wages to an employment agency. That's why ethical agencies will arrange for you to pay the fee over a period of several months. Don't do business with an agency that wants ness with an agency that wants its fee in two months or less.

• Compare interest rates. Even if you can pay the agency's fee in, say, nine months, you should examine the contract for the annual percentage rate (APR) of interest you'll have to pay. Depending on the fee, the difference be-tween an APR of 12 percent and one of 18 percent could be several hundred dollars in

Here are three other points to keep in mind:

 Never sign an ex-clusive contract with one employment agency. Sign up with several agencies as well as with your state's employment office, where the placement service is free. Never agree to pay a fee unless you get a job through an agency.

Never let an agency pressure you to take a job that pressure you to take a job that you realize you are not suited for—even if you're desperate for work. If you do, you not only will have to pay the fee, but may also be looking for a better job within a few months. Besides, ethical companies will not hire you if you are not qualified for the particular job.

• Never interview for a job without asking if the com-job without asking if the company will pay the employment agency's fee. Many companies are willing to pay the fee for top-notch workers. 801 Shadow Lane (Counseling Center) Announcing Relocation! John McCormick Agency
