

Study of the Black

Church Underway

A major study of the Black Church is being conducted under the auspices of the Howard University School of Religion. Contrary to an earlier report, the study is not being funded by a grant from the Andrew Mellon Foundation.

The study, which is being conducted in two phases, will focus on the history of the Black Church, its mode of communication and its contributions to individuals, groups and the society at large.

The first phase is a preliminary examination in the metropolitan area of Washington, D.C. from March through August, 1976. The second phase of the study, which will be conducted in selected areas of the United States, is to be completed by June, 1977.

Dr. Lovenger Bowden, the principal investigator, and Dr. Lawrence N. Jones, dean of the School of Religion, will report on the findings of the first phase within the next few weeks.

In discussing the study, Dr. Bowden said: "The Black Church is the only institution of and for Blacks which started in the African forests, survived slavery, and remains perhaps the most viable organization of the Black community in the United States. Under the leadership of the African priest or medicine man, after the Christian pastor, the Black Church has preserved in itself the remnants of African tribal life, and in many communities throughout North America from the real unit of race life - perhaps accounting in large measure for the survival strategies of individuals in the Black community."
