'Visions'

The latest example of public television initiative in providing audiences what they cannot find elsewhere will be evident as 'Visions' premieres Thursday, Oct. 21 at 9 p.m. with "Two Brothers," on TV 10.

"What audiences will see on 'Visions' will differ considerably in substance and style from week to week," Mr. Barbara Schultz, producer comments. "It is not something done by design."

Ms. Schultz's comments fit precisely with the free-fold aim with which 'Visions' was conceived: to encourage new drama for television; to provide a continuing opportunity for American writers to write for television, and ultimately, to help in revitalizing American television drama.

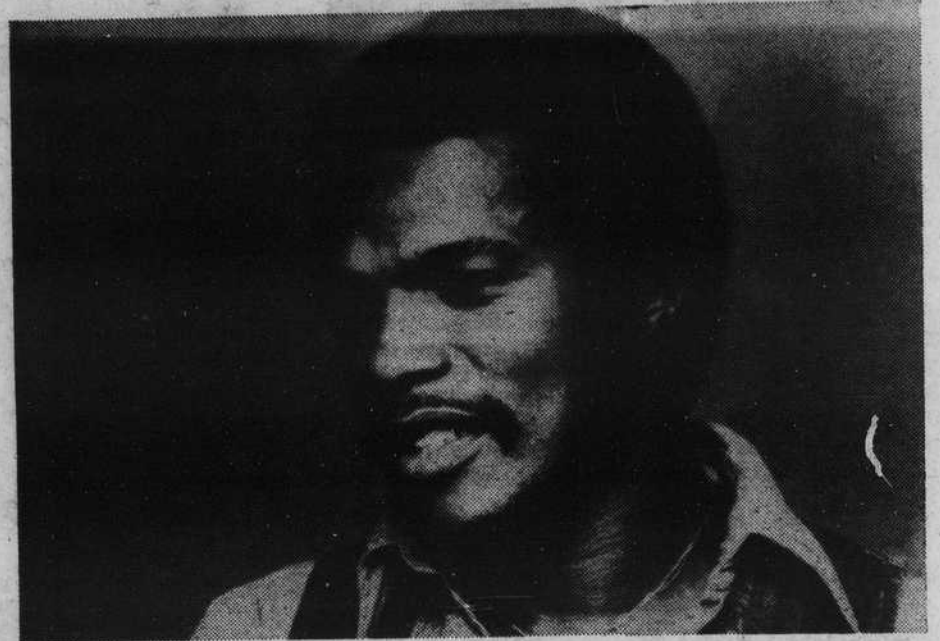

What viewers will see on the first "Visions" -- "Two Brothers," a play by Conrad Bromberg, who has never written for television before -- tells the story of a young doctor who despite his older brother's efforts to help him, is unable to cope with his own mental illness. "Two Brothers" will repeat Saturday, Oct. 23 at 11 p.m.

Madame Bovary

Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," which shocked 19th century readers with its vivid portrait of a romantic adultress, will be seen on TV-10's Masterpiece Theatre for four successive weeks beginning Sunday, Oct. 10 at 9 p.m. and repeating Monday, Oct. 11 at a new early evening time for public broadcasting fans.

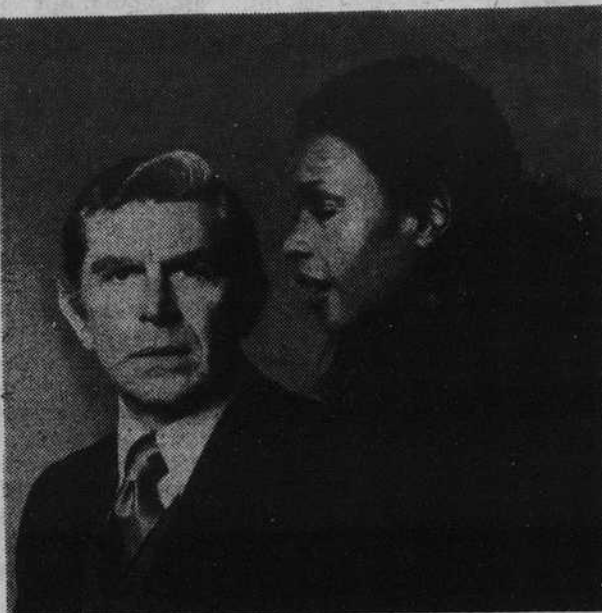

Playing the tragic heroine who set tongues wagging as she tried to escape the boredom of marriage in the arms of other men is Francesca Annis, who won the N.Y. Drama Critics Award for her portrayal of another classic tragic heroine -- Ophelia in Nichol Williamson's "Hamlet."

Its 50-year-old author who worked on the book for almost five years, was condemned for the subject matter, and at the same time praised for the honesty and skill with which he handled it. The TV dramatization has drawn nothing but praise.

For someone whose professional career in music began at the age of twelve, one might expect Gavin Christopher -- now over twice that age -- to have at least a couple of albums circulating through the world of black vinyl. But unlike so many artists who are put in the studio before their time and consequently emerge with flawed products, Gavin has moved in a consistent natural progression on a route determined by an awareness of his own readiness and capabilities, and has waited for the right time and the right place to record and produce his first album.

Christopher's music is funky r & b, soaring jazz, soothing soul; but in essence, Gavin's music is simply himself; mature, full-realized, music reflecting his own search for the sanctuary within himself, that

BEVERLY TODD STARS with Andy Griffith in Luigi Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Ms. Todd, a frequent guest star on television, portrays "The Stepdaughter" in the modern classic, premiering on Hollywood Television Theatre, Thursday, Oct. 14 at 9:00 p.m. on Channel #10. The play was produced by Norman Lloyd and directed by Stacy Keach.
