Consumer Survival Kit on Sporting Goods

Americans spend close to a million dollars a day on sporting goods. This week's Consumer Survival Kit, airing Sunday, November 28 at 6 p.m. on Channel 10, offers advice on tennis and golf equipment, skis and bikes that will help complement your hobby without insulting your budget. The quiz of the week discusses several types of golf clubs, the safety factor in bicycles, and inexpensive wood racquets.

Choosing and buying a tennis racquet requires knowledge prior to purchase time, noting the importance of weight and balance, flex, grip size, stringing, and the advantages and disadvantages of wood, metal or composite racquets.

Consumer Survival Kit reporter Rhea Feikin lists the respective advantages of ten, five, three and single-speed bikes. She also discusses their size, the weights, components, safety, price and packaging. Close to 700,000 bikes were stolen last year alone, and the segment stresses the importance of bike locks, emphasizing types and costs.

Buying ski equipment is the third focus of the evening. Tests that can be made when buying skis are demonstrated and the composition and costs of skis is discussed. An important follow up focuses on ski boots, their construction, fit, and cost.

And last of all, golfing equipment - with the importance stresses of golf clubs fitting the player's build and swing is noted and a detailed explanation of golf clubs demonstrated - swing weight, pro-line clubs, store-line clubs, half-sets, full-sets, and costs.

A Consumer Survival Kit is offered to viewers at the close of the program.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES THEN, TEAMMATES NOW: Last Winter NBA All-Star Nate (Tiny) Archibald (center, #5) starred for the Kansas City Kings and would feed passes to K.C. teammate Larry McNeil (right #10). Meanwhile, Al Skinner (left, #42) was a guard for the N.Y. Nets and feeding off to then-teammate Julius (Dr. J.) Erving. Last summer, they were friendly enemies in the Robert Douglas Professional Basketball League, where Archibald and McNeil played for the Lord Calvert Superstars quintet while Skinner was a strong force for the Passport Scotch team. Now, the former winter and mid-summer opponents are teammates on the N.Y. Nets, which traded players to Kansas City in order to acquire Archibald and McNeil. And instead of being friendly enemies next summer, the trio hope to play together with Lord Calvert or Passport.
