Sammy Joins Dinah On DINAH! In Las Vegas

MR BOJANGLES: Sammy Davis, Jr., breaks up Dinah Shore when he tells her "Until I was 10 all I knew was 'Hey babe, what's happening?'" Today Sammy says, he is leading a srraight life and "it ain't easy. The last three years I've been leading a straight life and it's really shocking." Sammy is one of Dinah's guests when she takes DINAH! to Las Vegas for a week of shows, which air in most major markets the week of February 7th. DINAH! is syndicated nationally and internationally by 20th Century Fox Television.

DENIECE WILLIAMS

This Is 'NICEY'

When asked, Deniece Williams tells you she didn't know just how success would come her way: she just knew it would happen.

Most would agree that to augment Stevie Wonder's group, Wonderlove, would be just fine, but not Deniece, or Nicey, as she is known to family, friends, and now to those who have her first album on Columbia Records entitled "This Is Niccy."

"It feels really good to have all of this happening because I have worked so hard in the past and now I am seeing the results of it."

The results have been fantastic indeed. Her first LP even promises to reach gold status, and on tour Niccy is knocking them dead all over the country.

"I always thought I would do something special. I guess this is it."

Deniece Williams' story is like so many others in showbusiness: a lot of chance happenings. Deniece originally set out to be a nurse, and while attending high school in her home town of Gary, Indiana, she worked part-time in a local record shop. Constantly hearing the various sounds piped around the shop, she'd bury her boredom by singing along with the current hits.

"I love to sing," she remembers, "but I never thought about doing it for a living. It was just something I loved to do."
