SOUL TRAIN

The Dramatics, Randy Crawford and the Crown Heights Affair occupy center stage this weekend on Soul Train.

Singing "Finger Fever," "Be My Girl," currently a best selling single, and "I Can't Get Over You," from their latest album, JOY RIDE, the Dramatics bring an added dimension to their performance with their dazzling choreography.

Completely versatile, they mix gospel, pop and soul music in an effort to maintain their broad appeal. Detroiters all, the group is composed of Ron Banks, L. J. Reynolds, Lenny Mayes, Willie Ford and Larry Demps.

Randy Crawford, who began her professional career while still in high school in Cincinnati, interprets "I Let You Walk Away" and "I'm Easy" in the unique style which captured the admiration of the late Cannonball Adderley before his death. It was her rendition of "Gonna Give lovin' a Try," from his last album, BIG MAN, and "Everything Must Change" which led to her first recording contract.

For their Soul Train debut, Crown Heights Affair performs "Dancin'." Led by William Anderson, guitarist, the eight-man group features Phil Thomas as lead singer.

Throughout the show, the Soul Train dancers add extra viewing pleasure.

Soul Train is sponsored by Johnson Products Co., the nation's leading black manufacturer of hair care products and cosmetics.
