

Service problems should be ours. Not yours.

Dependable telephone service in your business is something you simply take for granted. Which is the way it should be.

But one of these days you might be approached by a telephone salesman who isn't from the telephone company. He'll want to sell you a separate interconnect system. He'll want to hook it up to our telephone network.

We think you should hear his story. Then, after you have his proposal, ask a Centel Communications Consultant to make a proposal.

After you've compared them, you won't be surprised that more than 90% of our business customers chose Centel.

Maybe that's because they know that Centel services 1,500,000 telephones around the nation. And has the trained repairmen, and parts, and equipment, and mobile units, and wherewithall to back it up. And take care of it.

Maybe it's because as your company grows and changes, you know Centel has the ability to match your communication needs with your business needs.

So, if there's any worrying to be done, we want to do it for both of us. Would you really want it any other way?
