

CBS Work Training Program

Phillip Washington won hearty congratulations from the CBS staff at a farewell party held recently to celebrate his graduation from the CBS Work Training Program for high school students.

Phillip came to CBS Records at the initiation of the program in April 1976 from Youth Activists Now, (YAN), a youth organization founded by Jan Berger, the Director, which recruits high school students for part-time jobs. He is the first student since the start of the program to graduate from high school and therefore graduate from the program too. Each student is allowed to work four hours a day, five days a week during time off from classes.
