Latimore, the sensational soul sex symbol, headlines Soul Train this weekend, together with a bright, young talented trio, Shalamar, and the Crown Heights Affair, who are making a fast return engagement on the show.

Strong and bluesy styling characterizes Latimore's rendition of his recently released singles, "Somethin' 'Bout 'Cha," and the title song from his latest album, It Ain't Where You Been.

A composer and keyboard artist, too, Latimore often accompanies himself standing while playing and singing. His biggest hit to date is "Let's Strighten It Out," a million seller which he penned.

Shalamar, two males and a female, make their debut appearance on Soul Train singing "Uptown Festival."

The Crown Heights Affair lend their talents to "Searching For Your Love," featuring vocalist Phil Thomas and William Anderson, guitarist.

Produced by Don Cornelius, Soul Train is sponsored by Johnson Products Co., the nation's leading black manufacturer of hair care products and cosmetics.
