SLUGGERS SALUTED - Olympic Gold Medal boxers Michael (left) and Leon Spinks will return to their hometown of St. Louis October 7 for a "Budweiser Salute to the Brothers Spinks" on the first night of the St. Louis American's 43rd annual Black Expo. Budweiser is also sponsoring three-round exhibition bouts by each Spinks and his professional sparring partner, and other activities in the community.

BLACK POETRY

If You Love...

*If you love someone,
And have set them free—for their sake.*

And your nights are spent Wondering if they will ever come back to you...

COOL IT! AND HANG LOOSE!

*If they do come back...
They never really left.
If they don't...*

You never really had them.
—Kathy Fittz

(Here a philosophical,
hang loose attitude is commended to all who dare risk love.)

ARENA

The executive director of an organization concerned with the influences of sports on society will give a public lecture Oct. 3 at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Dr. Richard E. Lapchick of ARENA: The Institute for Sport and Social Analysis will speak at 10 a.m. in the Humanities Auditorium on "International Politics -- Apartheid and Sport."

The talk will focus on how sport is used inside South Africa and how opponents of segregation there have utilized sports to fight the South Africans.

ARENA is an institute of scholars and journalists concerned with examining serious issues in the field of sport and society.

An associate professor of political science at Virginia Wesleyan College, Lapchick presented a paper last month at the World Conference on Apartheid conducted in Lagos, Nigeria. Last fall, he spent four weeks in the People's Republic of China as one of 20 national leaders who toured the communist country.

His book, "The Politics of Race and International Sport: The Case of South Africa," was published in 1975.
