The long-time Nevada resident said his campaign would consist largely of travelling through Nevada in order to do a lot of listening to the people. "The voters have a right to demand the opportunity to express their concerns to a candidate in a face-to-face basis."

List said it is too early to predict all the issues which will develop during the campaign, but predicted growth-related issues, such as crime, planning, natural resources and housing will be debated. He noted that Nevadans have historically voted for the man and disregarded party labels. This state is still small enough the voters can judge each man's experience and record, List stated.

"Actually, it will be the people who develop the issues, not a handful of politicians," List said.

The attorney general was first elected Nevada's chief law enforcement official in 1970 after serving as district attorney of Ormsby County (Carson City).

List, 41, presently serves as a member of the state's Board of Examiners, Highway Board, Pardons Board and Prison Board.

During his tenure as attorney general, List has expanded the office's scope, including the establishment of a full-time Las Vegas office during the first year of his first term.

List also created a Criminal Division of his office and has investigated and prosecuted cases ranging from narcotics to murder.

He has gained a national reputation for his vigorous prosecution in the area of consumer concerns, concentrating on people-related problems running a gamut from mobile home construction standards to fraudulent sales practices.

List is one of seven presidential appointees to the National Gambling Commission, and in 1977 he was appointed by the President to the United States Air Force Academy Board of Visitors.

He was admitted to the Nevada Bar in 1962 after being graduated by the University of California's Hastings School of Law. He also is a graduate of Utah State University and Carson City High School.

List and his wife, Kathy, reside in Carson City with their three children: Suzanne, 12; Hank, 10; and Michelle, 5.

List's family first came to Nevada over 30 years ago where they operated ranches in Eureka and Lander counties. His parents, Frank and Alice List, still are active in ranching in Washoe County.

Alan List, the attorney general's brother, is a Pershing County rancher.

Robert List, Republican candidate for governor, is serving his second term as Nevada's Attorney General.

List was first elected Nevada's chief law official in 1970 and is the first Republican to hold the post since 1894. Prior to being elected attorney general, List served as the District Attorney of Ormsby County (now Carson City).

In his capacity as attorney general, List has served as legal counsel to every state agency, as well as provided legal services to a number of other public entities, boards and commissions.

List, 41, also serves as a member of the state's Prison Board, Pardons Board and Highway Board--three extremely important positions to residents of Nevada.

As a member of the state's Board of Examiners, List has developed an extensive knowledge of the state budget and assists in overseeing the spending patterns of state agencies.

During his tenure as Nevada's top law enforcement official, List has brought new meaning to the Office of Attorney General, broadening its scope and establishing an agency recognized nationally as one of the most progressive.

Early in the first year of his original term as attorney general, List realized that Nevada's largest population center needed better service. As a result, a fulltime Office of the Attorney General was established in Clark County. In addition to the Las Vegas main office, deputies have been assigned to serve as legal counsel to the Welfare Division, Gaming Control, Taxicab Authority, Department of Motor Vehicles, Equal Rights Commission, Consumer Affairs Division, Colorado River Commission, State Highway Department and numerous other boards and commissions.

List also created the Criminal Division which has investigated and prosecuted cases ranging from narcotics to bribery to murder throughout the state.

He also has gained a national reputation for his vigorous prosecution in the area of consumer concerns, concentrating on people-related problems running a gamut from mobile home construction standards to fraudulent sales practices.

An education program emphasizing severe penalties for shoplifting, instituted by List, has saved the business community and consumers thousands of dollars.

In the area of natural resources, List has fought for the protection of Lake Tahoe and has stood guard over the state's treasury in the face of numerous suits aimed at the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency.

List also led the legal fight to protect the water rights from the Truckee River, a case which affected thousands of northern Nevada residents.

The longtime Carson City resident has served as chairman of the Western Conference of Attorneys General as a member of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Attorneys General.

List is one of six presidential appointees to the National Gambling Commission. In 1977 he also was appointed by President of the United States Air Force Academy Board of Visitors. The attorney general served as a U. S. delegate to a NATO conference in Paris and recently toured Israel as a guest of that nation's Ministry of Justice.

He also has represented the American Council of Young Leaders on visits to the Soviet Union and Western Europe.

List was admitted to the Nevada Bar in 1962 after being graduated by the Hastings School of Law, University of California.

He is a graduate of Utah State University and Carson City High School.

List's recreational activities include being a 24-year veteran private pilot, avid skier, fisherman and hunter.

In his speech at a luncheon which preceded the Southern Cristian Leadership Conference's Spring meeting of its national Board of Directors, U.S. Commission on Civil Rights Chairman Arthur S. Flemming said that police brutality would be one of the Commission's major areas of concern. Earlier, SCLC president, Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Lowery had emphasized the organization's own concern over the rising number of unarmed Blacks killed by law enforcement officers.

Flemming, who stressed in his address that civil rights progress has not kept up with vast changes in American life, summarized the Commission's interest in such traditional areas as school desegregation, housing and employment. "Because of a comment President Lowery made . . . about the march in Gadsden, I want to identify one other area of (the Commission's) concern" said Flemming. "In the past year this Commission has been on the receiving end of a number of very significant representations relative to police brutality, directed particularly against members of minority groups. We have heard from Philadelphia, Chicago, Houston and other cities."

He pledged that, "We're going to make this whole issue of police brutality one of our basic thrusts. We're going to make some in-depth studies. We are going to hold some public hearings, and I hope we can come up with findings and recommendations that will become a rallying point."

Also present at the April 11 luncheon, which as attended by 200 Kansas City-area black and white businessmen, civic leaders, and government officials, were Dr. Ralph D. Abernathy, President Emeritus of SCLC; SCLC officers, Hosea Williams, National Executive Director; Rev. Emmanuel Cleaver, West Central Region Vice President; and local Chapter Chairman, Rev. Jesse L. Douglas.

In the 1978 election of justice of the peace for Las Vegas, Four justices of the peace will be elected. One of these will be selected to serve a two year term, with the help of the State Supreme Court deciding which one of the four will be appointed to a two year term.

Under this system it will cost the tax payer additional monies. For the reason, the state Supreme Court Justices will be using their time solving this problem when their time could have been used for more important issues.

I believe that if a justice of the peace would volunteer for the two year term it would save the citizens tax monies. If elected justice of the peace for Las Vegas Township I will volunteer for the two year term.

This way if it is believed by the voting populace that I have not performed my assigned duties properly I would not campaign for the Judgeship election two years from now.

Sincerely
Greg Nyberg
Candidate For Justice of the Peace
Las Vegas Township

except for a couple of minor traffic tickets. He is asking, "What does it take for a Black man to become a permanent citizen of Las Vegas? One that is not constantly harrassed, or embarrassed in public, -- or even arrested?"

There is a feeling here that this is just a continuation of the harrassment received ever since he was fired from Reeco. At the time of his discharge, took a personal survey, and found there were others treated the same way, but no one else would help put pressure on the matter.

Just what is a Black supposed to do? Is this discrimination to continue? Isn't there someone who can help?
