

JOHN H. JOHNSON

John H. Johnson, publisher, businessman and humanitarian of Chicago, has been named to the International Executive Committee of Here's Life, planned as the most extensive Christian social and evangelization mission in recorded history.

His appointment was announced by Wallace E. Johnson, co-founder, director and member of the executive committee of Holiday Inns, who serves as International Chairman of Here's Life, a communication program designed "to share with every person on earth the teachings and love of Jesus Christ." Its first year goal is to raise $100 million in cash and pledges.

Objective of the five-year Here's Life program, Wallace Johnson said, is to introduce basic ongoing ministries of evangelism and discipleship into every nation and protectorate of the world, support these ministries with the deployment of thousands of men and women working at their own vocations in foreign countries while assisting churches in evangelism and social action, and use saturation discipleship and evangelism materials and techniques in cooperation with national churches and other Christian organizations.

These concepts, he said, are the creation of Campus Crusade for Christ International, headed by William Bright, founder and president.

John Johnson is publisher of Ebony, Jet, Ebony Jr!, Black Stars and Black World; chairman and chief executive officer of Supreme Life Insurance Company; chairman of WJPC, Chicago's first and only black-owned radio station; and president of Fashion Fair Cosmetics.

He is a director of several major U.S. corporations including The Greyhound Corporation, Bell & Howell Company, Arthur D. Little, Inc., Twentieth Century-Film Corporation and Zenith Radio Corporation.

Mr. Johnson was appointed by Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson as special U.S. ambassador to independence ceremonies of the Ivory Coast and Kenya, respectively. He was a member of the National Selective Service Commission in 1966 and a member of the President's Commission for the observance of the 25th anniversary of the United Nations in 1970.

He is a trustee of Boston University, the Art Institute of Chicago and United Negro College Fund; a member of the Advisory Council of Harvard Graduate School of Business; and a director of The Advertising Council.

He holds honorary doctoral degrees from 15 U.S. colleges, universities and institutes. Additionally, he has received a number of major awards from professional journalism, publishing and communications associations over a span of two decades.

A FRESH HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE?

A review of The Free and The Unfree: A New History of the United States (Penguin Books, N.Y.) 448 pages—paperback, $4.95.

There is nothing novel about "fresh perspectives" on history. Every young historian knows better, so he or she believes, than those who taught or preceded them.

This newly-released book is an excellent text, although those who seek in it some earth-shattering new revelations will be disappointed. It is more of a factual treatise, carefully arranged, than a fresh philosophical approach to the meaning of our all-too-poorly perceived traditional pictures of America's past.

This reticence to give unbridled praise to this fine work of scholarship stems from a long-manifest need for a thoughtful re-writing of American history complete with "warts and all."

For young people and for the general public, looking for this cosmic event of the "great day for history in America," this book is not an answer.

Yet it is a workmanlike production useable for a ready reference and thoroughly worthy of consideration for introductory collegiate and advanced high school textbook use.
