Students at Jo Mackey School were impressed with a recent experiment held with bees in Mrs. Linda Gregg's classroom. The demonstration was done by Mr. Mac Crockett father of one of Mrs. Gregg's student - Greg who was just as eager to assist his dad. Bees were shown in a plexiglass case filled with drones, larvae, the queen bee, and worker bees capping cells.

Mr. Crockett showed pictures of various kinds of equipment used by bee-keepers and answered questions posed by students. He also treated the class to a taste of delicious honey. This experiment was held in Mrs. Linda Gregg's classroom.

ORR JR. HIGH

Robert Andrich and Rodessa Goings both 7th graders at William Orr Junior High School, were the grand prize winners (Jr. High Division) in the Spank Dance Contest, sponsored by KVOV and Casa blanca Records.

Monday May 22 at 8:00 a.m. these proud young people with Diane Lewis and Darrell Millener, 11th graders from Western High School, along with KVOV Disc Jockey Don Wong and Rick Newman, General Manager, boarded a Western Airline DC-10 for a hop to Los Angeles. At L.A. International they were picked up in a chauffeured driven limousine, non stop to the Beverly Hilton Hotel for breakfast. After a most hearty breakfast was a tour of Casa blanca Records on Sunset Blvd.; A picture taking session with professional photographers with the chief executive and staff of Casa blanca Records; and a demonstration of the Spank Dance for all Casa blanca employees.

In the evening, the Chauffered limousine took them to the World Premiere of the movie "Thank God It's Friday", where they met Donna Summers, star of the movie. They also got autographs from other great stars, The Commodores, The Silvers, William Shattner of "Star Trek".

After a very interesting day, they went back to the Beverly Hilton Hotel for a room service dinner and spent an enjoyable night at the Beverly Hilton.

On Tuesday, they took a four and one-half hour tour of Universal Studios where they met the entire crew. They also attended a picture taking session for some of the National Magazines. Lunch was included in the tour.

Tired and exhausted; at 7:45 P.M. they boarded a Western Airline Jet headed for home, Good Old Las Vegas. Thank God its not Friday, but Tuesday night. This contest was sponsored by KVOV Radio in conjunction with the Clark County School District.

Orr Junior High School Social Science teacher Richard Wallace tells students Russell Stover and Pierre Massar how much he liked their Grand Champion Award entry in the Youth Fair. Far right, teacher Robert Gettler holds onto and examines revolving trophy that went along with the Social Science Fair award. The two ninth graders researched the major European battles of World War II in preparing their prize-winning exhibit.

R O Gibson

Candace Brown, is a seventh grade student at Robert O. Gibson. Before coming to Gibson Candy attended Mable Hoggard Sixth Grade Center.
