ALLURING ACT--Connie Stevens, star of film-stage and TV and one of Las Vegas' most popular performers, headlines with comedian David Steinberg this weekend at the Aladdin Hotel. Stevens re-

The Aladdin Hotel's coupling of Connie Stevens and comedian David Steinberg is proving to be one of the Strip's most alluring showroom attractions, with the dynamic double-header steamrolling into its first weekend of performances in the Bagdad Showroom.

Humorist Steinberg titillates audiences twice nightly with his clever commentaries on the country's sexual and political habits. Not even religion is to satirist Steinberg.

Connie Stevens, television-stage and film star and popular Las Vegas headliner, has returned to the Aladdin Hotel with a sparkling new production a marvelous musical revue that showcases and salutes "The Total Woman."

Ms. Stevens has come a long way since Jerry Lewis discovered the cute 16-year-old in a teen age hot rod movie. The alluring entertainer sped from dragstrip to The Strip to become one of Las Vegas hottest attractions.

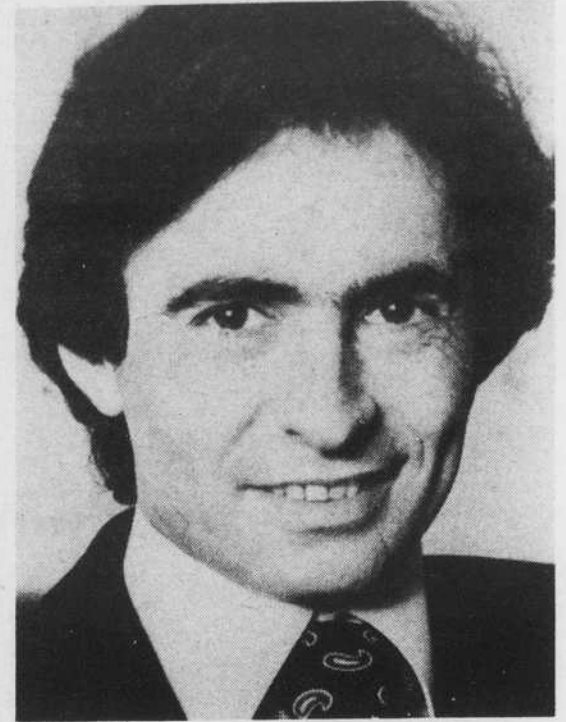

Television viewers remember Connie as Cricket on the longrunning series "Hawaiian Eye" and as George Burns' effervescent co-star in "Wendy and Me." More recent appearances have been on "Love Boat," "Fantasy Island" and "Celebrity Challenge of the Sexes." She just completed filming "Side Show," a made-for-TV movie in which she portrays a high wire circus artists.

Her film credits range from such smash comedies as "Never Too Late" and "Rock-a-By Baby" with Jerry Lewis to the highly controversial TV drama "The Sex Symbol." Her starring role as the Marilyn Monroe like character in that movie won rave reviews and reaffirmed Ms. Stevens' adeptness at both comedy and drams.

As Bob Hope's "all-time favorite trouper," Stevens has proven herself just as popular with international audiences as with her many American fans. A recent tour in the Philippines was such a success that President Marcos and his First Lady held a gala reception at the palace in her honor.

David Steinberg's fans are watching his burgeoning career with great interest. Since his first featured film role in "The End" with Burt Reynolds, Steinberg has enjoyed a number of choice Hollywood assignments. In addition to screenwriting and directing, Steinberg stars in Universal Studio's "Something Short of Paradise," a romantic comedy to be released this summer.

turns to the Bagdad Showroom with a totally new musical revue saluting "The Total Woman," joined by satirist Steinberg, who shares his always-witty perceptions of the day's news and views.

Carson's favorite sit-in hosts, the witty political-social satirist was described by The New York Times as "a combination of Woody Allen and Lenny Bruce." Newsweek Magazine placed him "in the forefront of new comedians."

THEATRICAL ROCK--Sha Na Na, the greasy gang who spawned the '50s nostalgia craze, will lead audiences back to the decade of bobby soxers and crew cuts Sunday evening (March 11) in the Alladdin Hotel's Performing Arts Theatre. The zany spoof group, who moved from Woodstock to Prime Time, have been playing their Broadway-type revue to full houses all over the country. Dr. Hook, an equally theatrical rock 'n roll band, joins Sha Na Na in concert. Tickets are available at the Aladdin box office, Tower and Odyssey Records and Wrongdaddy's in Boulder City.
