MIRTH MAKERS -- Aladdin showroom audiences are all smiles during the final weekend of performances by Lola Falana, "The First Lady of Las Vegas Entertainment," and The Hudson Brothers. One of

Las Vegas is getting what Las Vegas wants -- Lola. Lola Falana, Headlines with The Hudson Brothers this weekend in the Aladdin's main showroom. The enchanting performer was the perfect candidate for the "first lady" appointment. A superb singer, dynamite dancer and delightful comedienne, Lola epitomizes the compleat Las Vegas entertainer. She even plays drums and conducts the orchestra in a show that continually brings crowds to their feet. "Her charisma with audience is magnetic and total," one critic wrote. "Rarely does the force of personality, coupled with loads of talent, dominate the stage the way Lola Falana does," another observed. Las Vegas' "first lady" is joined by her talented "first family," The Hudson Brothers. The musical comedy trio's Aladdin engagements have been received with unrestrained enthusiasm by critics and audiences alike. Reviewers call the brothers' balanced blend of song, dance and madcap comedy "one of the finest acts to play Las Vegas in many moons" and "one of the most enjoyable shows in town." Born into a show business family, Bill, Mark and Brett Hudson got their first big break six years ago when rock superstar Elton John recognized their musical talent and signed them to his record label. After several hit singles, the brothers became increasingly interested in developing their collective comedy career, an ambition that led to their own summer television variety show, "Razzle Dazzle" and most recently "Bonkers!" Their burgeoning Las Vegas career adds yet another chapter to the Hudson Brothers' success story.
