

Mason Seeks County Commissioner Seat

BY ED BROWN

"We may be backing Leonard Mason in the upcoming election against Clark County Commissioner Sam Bowler," said NAACP president James McMillan. "It is not definite as yet. We are looking at this possibility," he told the SENTINEL.

The Nevada Voter League — the political arm of the Las Vegas chapter, NAACP, has been exploring this overall situation recently.

Dissatisfied with what he called Bowler's "absentee-landlord" representation of the black community, McMillan said the League may support Mason if he were the only black candidate to file for the position by the July 16 deadline. At this point, no one else has indicated an interest in running for the post.

Mason

Earlier this year, the NAACP vowed to unseat Bowler because he totally neglected to represent the people of his district, choosing instead to be "a power broker" for the Strip, according to McMillan.

After some complaints were filed in the black community about Bowler's "absenteeism," he was observed visiting a few of the programs indigent to the black community. Many observers have reported that Bowler, generally, had not been seen visiting or inspecting the area involved in the district section involving the black community.

Mason said he would work hard in the upcoming election and feels very confident that, this time, victory would be within his grasp.
