

How Our Athletes Go With God

By Bishop
E. N. Webb, Jr.

We are given an opportunity during this Olympic season to share some insight into the preparation and training, as well as, ultimate achievements of various athletic contenders worldwide. As we focus our attention upon these hopeful contenders, let us relate their fervent endeavor to that of those contenders spoken of in Jude. Mentioned are those who in earnest contended for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

Each of these Olympic hopefuls strives to be at his best throughout the various fleeting moments of the challenge set before him. Thus he prepares himself mentally, physically and spiritually. The whole mental attitude must be such as to bring into captivity every wandering imagination and to commit every thought towards the achieving of his goal. While the body relentlessly endures the many strenuous feats and disciplines. The contender seeks to command his body so much so that every reflex habitually yields to drive empowered by a will to continue on in spirit of any unforeseen emotional upheavals or inconsistencies. All of the above pertain to the preparation for the challenge where delight is a commendable asset but steadfastness is an attribute of necessity!

The choice of coach is extremely vital because he will be the most important single factor in influencing the total outcome of all your labors.

You are completely at his disposal as you commit yourself wholly into his trust. The coach serves as your counsellor, guide and chief overseer. He is, in fact, an extension of yourself. He sets the pace for your advancement by the exercises, encouragement or chastisement he brings into the relationship.

Along with his chosen course of training are included an additional set of disciplines and sacrifices. All social activities must relate to your objective just as each awakening and sleeping moment is fashioned to accommodate his chosen lifestyle. Every minute of the athlete's time must be redeemed for use towards the

McMillan, Wilson File For Office

A double-barreled bolt of exciting news hit the black community late Wednesday afternoon and it was part of forecasts revealed in earlier issues of the LAS VEGAS SENTINEL.

Dr. James McMillan, president of the local chapter, NAACP, has filed for the District C, County Commissioner seat now held by Dick Ronzone and Woodrow Wilson, veteran legislator, has filed for the County Commissioner seat held by Sam Bowler.

The SENTINEL mentioned in the May 23 issue that reports were being circulated that McMillan would be giving some thought about running for the District C post.

WILSON

Last week, the SENTINEL reported that a community push was underway seeking some support for Wilson to run for the District D seat held by Commissioner Bowler.
