

'Ladies and Gentlemen, may I present our next County Commissioners...?'

By Ed Brown

The strong and popular black community leaders have entered the political race, filing on the last registration day, to add a new and interesting dimension to the total picture.

Enter surprise candidates for the County Commissioner seats: Dr. James B. McMillan, president, local chapter, NAACP, who filed for the seat held by R. J. Ronzone; and veteran legislator Woodrow Wilson who threw his hat in the ring to unseat incumbent Sam Bowler.

Entry of these two advocates have thrown a new light on the political spectrum. An air of ecstasy and new hope has emerged on the horizon. The registration effort in the black community has been revitalized. There's a breath of fresh air fermenting.

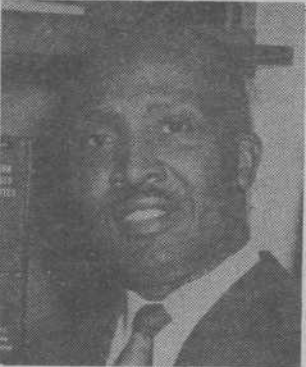

State Senator Joe Neal will be making his bid for re-election in Senate District 4 against Democrat A.J. Thompson and Republicans Jamet C. Baliotis and Bill McCurdy.

In Assembly District 6, Assemblyman Rev. Marion Bennett will face Democrats Larry Abdullah and Gene Collins while Republicans, Donn Baliotis and Priscilla Myers plus Libertarian, Neil E. Greppin, Ronald John M. Ketchum enter the fight in quest for the seat.

Assembly District 7, held by Democrat Lonie Chaney finds the picture clouded with Democrat candidates Louise H. Jordan, Dorothy M. Walker and Ozia Thomas plus Republican, James C. Haynes.

WILSON

District 18, black candidate Richard A. Stephens will join with Republican James Wilson in an effort to unseat incumbent Tom Hickey.

School Trustee Virginia Brooks Brewster is running unopposed in School District C and Regent June Whitley is a shoo-in for Regent, Sub-District A.

Newly appointed Justice of Peace Earle W. White, Jr. will find the sledding not easy in his first quest for the elected seat against candidates W. Kozak, John Sleeper, John B. Squires and William S. Taylor.

This is the new 1980 primary lineup which finds much work ahead. However, nothing can be taken for granted in this peculiar American mix of politics. The zany and unexpected are the norm in today's political process.

Candidate Arrested

One of the five candidates for the District 7 Assembly seat was arrested by Metro Police Monday morning on a drug charge.

Ozia Thomas, who was said to have along with three other candidates were vying for the seat currently held by incumbent Lonie Chaney.

Thomas was booked in to the Clark County Jail on charges of possession of a controlled substance and failure to obey a traffic signal.
