Israeli Children Seldom Undergo Many Changes

Al Brown, Coordinator Human Relations

Egypt is a very old country whose history extends back more than 5,000 years B.C. It was occupied by the Greek for three centuries and by the Romans for four hundred years. Presently Egypt has a population of 42 million people, who live in the fertile cultivated lands around the Nile River. Over 96% of the Country is nothing but desert, and consequently, Egypt is very poor.

Children are the same in many ways throughout the world. However customs and cultures are similiar in Egypt & Israel but much different from America. For example public education to age twelve became compulsory in 1940, in Egypt. But Egypt still was 80% illiteracy.

To play in the murky green waters of an irrigation canal, while his water buffalo turn the wheels that send water cursing through the fields, is a daily occupation for many young Egyptians childrens, to stand near a stop point for a tour bus, waiting to sell souvenirs to tourist is a daily routine for many young children in Israel. These children have no knowledge of the conveniences that our children now enjoy in America, their lives in ancient countries have and will remain the same for centuries to come.
