MULTIPLE CHOICE. Arvis of the John Atchison Salon (44 West 55th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019, 212-265-6870) advocates a hairstyle that's unique, without being too shocking visually. He believes the time has come for black men to veer away from the rounded effect of a full Afro and into a period where more options are available. This cut demonstrates Arvis' theory through its versatility because it gives the impression of being several different hairstyles, depending upon the angle from which it's viewed. The hair is cut close to the head, and it gradually becomes fuller at the neck, while Arvis' distinctive addition is a creatively shaped back. There's also the option of creating a part if desired. Once home, the flexibility remains. After washing, the hair might be allowed to dry naturally, which will give a more cropped look, or blow it dry and fluff for a longer, fuller effect.
