CCSD AUCTION

The complex, built at a cost of $253,000, is supported by the members of Variety Club, Tent 39, who donated $150,000 towards its construction.

It is named for the principal of Variety School, Howard Marr, who has dedicated 22 years in the service and education of handicapped children.

On Oct. 24, the Clark County School District will hold a public auction of obsolete personal property at the fenced-in area adjacent to the parking lot behind the warehouse at 4212 Eucalyptus Ave. beginning at 9 a.m.

A list showing the sale items and the minimum bid prices may be obtained in the sale yard during the above viewing periods.

Personal or company checks will be accepted for the amount of purchase with proper identification. For additional information, call the purchasing department during business hours at 736-5225 or 736-5226.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE CLARK COUNTY

Gets Pilot Grant From Endowment Fund

Does the teaching of occupational and technical courses have to exclude ethical and cultural considerations?

From this question came a study and a proposal by the Clark County Community College which has resulted in a pilot grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The pilot grant, one of few being awarded by the NEH in this year of budget restrictions, totals $35,556, all the money requested by CCCC.

The money will be used to develop modular programming by which CCCC will be able to integrate humanities and occupational studies within the college.

The three modules to be developed and tested are (1) Service Ethics: issues related to the ethical dimensions of health occupations. (2) Marketplace Ethics: issues related to the ethical dimensions of marketing and business. (3) Technology in Literature: issues related to an awareness of the impact of technology on modern society.

All modules will be thoroughly evaluated by internal and external assessors as well as by students. After appropriate modifications, the modules will be incorporated into the curriculum of the college.
