canvas. However, he jumped right up and took the mandatory eight count.

The only actual punishment Holmes ever suffered were the numerous low-blows he was hit with during the bout. Cooney was penalized

Kareem Abdul Jabbar, Mr. T from the movie "Rocky III," retired NFL star Jim Brown, Bill Cosby, Rev. Jesse Jackson, Sugar Ray Leonard, and R & B singer-producer Ray Parker, Jr., just to name a few.

But one thing that really surprised each and everyone that night was the announcement three points during the course of the evening for delivering low blows.

There was just as much excitement outside of the ring as there was inside. There were chants of L-A-R-R-Y, L-A-R-R-Y, and C-O-O-N-E-Y, C-O-O-N-E-Y coming from the fans in the stands and you could even see that the entertainers and stars sitting ringside were really getting into the fight. These celebrities included: Todd Bridges of NBC's "Different Strokes," Los Angeles Laker stars Magic Johnson and the teary-eyed Gerry Cooney made while still in the ring after the fight. He apologized to all of his loyal followers for his defeat and added that he hoped he didn't let anyone down. "I tried, I really tried," he sobbed.

With all of the things that were said, and with all of the controversy surrounding the fight, the event proved to be nothing more than a "big hype" to Larry Holmes. "It's too bad that he had to have so many people telling him the wrong things," he said of Cooney. In an interview with Bryant Gumble on the "Today Show" Monday morning, Holmes pointed the finger at George Rappaport, Cooney's co-manager, for instigating and initiating much of the pre-fight controversy.

But now the fight is over and the question is, what's next for these two young men?

For Cooney, it's long hard hours back in the gym preparing for his next bout, possibly even preparing for Holmes vs. Cooney II.

As for Larry Holmes' future, there is no telling. But for right now you can bet there is nothing more than home on his mind, relaxation and sharing his victory with his family.

PROBLEMS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: I live in an apartment with a "month to month" arrangement with the landlord. In other words, we have no long tenure requirement. I may leave at any time, but my rent must be paid each month in advance. When I first moved in, I had to pay a $100.00 security fee with the understanding, in writing, that it was refundable if, when I move out, the apartment is left in the condition it was in when I first occupied it. I have been offered a good job out of town and I plan to leave immediately. I went to the landlord to arrange for the return of the "security" fee. My apartment is spotless with not a single scratch or mark on anything. As a matter of fact, it is in better condition now, than when I first occupied it. The landlord said the security fee is not refundable. I think he is wrong.

ANSWER: According to the Nevada revised statutes, the landlord may claim that portion of the security in such amounts as are reasonably necessary to repair damages to the premises caused by the tenant other than normal wear and pay the reasonable costs of cleaning the premises. If no such work is required, you should receive your security refund. If the landlord makes any claims, he must do so no later than 3 weeks after the termination of the tenancy by delivering it to you personally, or mailing it to you at your new address. The landlord, of course, must be able to prove his claim.

The Nevada Consumer Affairs Division is mandated to enforce statewide the laws covered under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, the Automotive Repair Act and the Door-To-Door Sales Act.
