accurate 20-foot layup (Jump shot). Also one of the key defensive players for LA, and will split time with Michael Cooper, who will be assigned the job of guarding Dr. J.

Kurt Rambis (6-9): Mr. Hustle for the Lakers, whose only jobs are to rebound and cause large amounts of trouble with roughness.*

Michael Cooper (6-7): Known as the best sixth-man in the business, Cooper is a standout defensive player who will always be the first off the bench. Can play the big guard or the small forward spots, and is very dangerous on the fast break.

Bob McAdoo (6-10): Hurt early in the playoffs, as of late has come off the bench to provide the Lakers with added offense. Must give quality relief to Kareem in order for the Lakers to repeat as champs.

Looking at the college roundball scene, University of Houston's head basketball coach Guy Lewis recently had fate smile upon him as his star center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon elected to remain in college rather pursue a career in the National Basketball Association.

However, as the date for underclassman to declare their eligibility arrived, Lewis did discover that junior forward Clyde Drexler, who is considered by most observers to be the next Dr. J, had entered his name in the June college draft.

Other underclassman who have declared hardship include: Ennis Whatley (Alabama), Russell Cross (Purdue), Byron Scott (Arizona State), and Derek Harper (Illinois).

On the local front in what should be termed: "Boxing Summer," here in Las Vegas Friday night, WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes should have little trouble with the younger Tim Witherspoon, who has a bright future in the fight game.

In the other big heavyweight bout on the card known as "The Crown Affair," the Dokes-Weaver rematch will be a war that shouldn't go the distance. Weaver, the ex-champ, wants his crown back and when motivated can be a very good fighter. Dokes on the other hand, has for years waited for the opportunity to own his own crown, one in which he won't give up easy.
