Black Struggle Against White Minority Rule In South Africa To Air On Channel 10

GENERATIONS OF RESISTANCE, airing Wednesday, June 22 at 10:00 p.m. on Channel 10 is a powerful documentary on the black struggle against white minority rule in South Africa. This film, the first of its kind, chronicles the black resistance movements in South Africa from the ZULU Wars of 1890 to the 1977 death of Steve Biko, founder of the Black Consciousness Movement.

Producer Peter Davis combines interviews and rare historical footage in this significant effort to uncover the little known history of the black South Africans' continued fight for basic human and civil rights. Members of the resistance movements interviewed include one of the founders of the African National Congress, an organization which attempted to work within the system, and exiled leaders of an organized, violent resistance movement. Their stories reveal why generation after generation of blacks have resisted white rule in South Africa.
