FURS GO CASUAL....

Though still luxurious and a delight to own and wear, furs are no longer "for use on special occasions only." There's a new down-to-earth attitude about furs, seen in the roomier, racier shapes; the shorter lengths; the natural colors; and the prevalence of more casual types of furs like rabbit. It all adds up to casual, unserious fur fashions, which are oriented to every-day, every-hour use.

The raciest of jackets is this one featuring a top of sheared rabbit dyed brown, stenciled in leopard spots and extravagantly fringed in brown leather, which matches the luxurious brown leather bottom.

Here, an ample sized coat of Canadian marmot in the new shorter 7/8 length.

A new way to extend the versatility of your fur coat — Wear a "shell," a coat of the thinnest waterproof coated cotton, over a "great" coat like this one of natural Canadian fisher with a notched collar and dolman sleeves.

Dashing is this black-dyed Finnish raccoon cardigan coat, also in the 7/8 length.
