TOM JONES AND GEORGE WALLACE TOGETHER AT CAESARS PALACE FEB. 8-21

When Tom Jones takes the stage in the Circus Maximus Showroom beginning Feb. 8, he will be following a very funny man. Some would say that George Wallace is the funniest man to come along in years.

Just a few years ago, George Wallace left his job as vice president of an advertising agency in the East to explore a career as a comedian. But don't think that Wallace is impulsive. The move was well thought-out.

Born in Atlanta, Wallace had wanted to be a successful comedian as long as he could remember.

But the timing (just like his act) had to be perfect.

Knowing that diving right into show business would be too risky, Wallace earned a degree in marketing and worked his way up to vice president of Douglas Leigh Advertising.

Once he had set aside enough of the money he had earned there to feel financially secure, he knew the timing was right to pursue his long-held dream on stage.

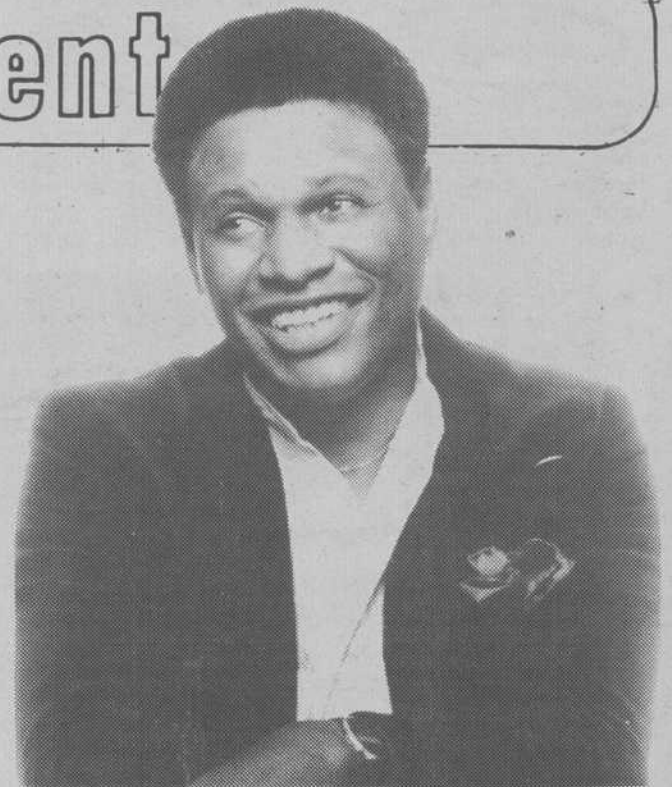

He started in local nightclubs and was quickly snapped up by a producer for "The Redd Foxx Show," who moved him to Los Angeles as a writer and performer.

From there, Wallace earned appearances with some of the biggest names in show business, including Tom Jones on stage in the Circus Maximus Showroom at Caesars Palace.

This is not the first time George Wallace has appeared in a premiere hotel/resort like Caesars Palace. And his fans say it surely won't be the last.

Jones and Wallace will perform two shows nightly, 8 and 11:30 p.m.; the price is $30 plus tax (includes two drinks). Phone 731-7333 for reservations.
