For those who were unable to attend, we urge you to read the following quips taken from her provocative speech:

"Why should school teachers be satisfied? They have to scuffle to pay their mortgages, visa cards and master charges, yet here comes a football player who makes so much money to play ball and can't even spell a three-letter word."

She says she loves sports. Basketball is her favorite sport and she has followed the UNLV Rebels who are on the map in the east. She said we should be proud of them.

She also loves Sugar Ray Leonard. He is a young and good looking and has a good future for himself. She could wake up any morning and find him under her Christmas tree, but she could not see him as confused as though he can't make his own decisions. She can't see him going back in the ring to go blind. He needs to enroll in a university and taken English 100, Psychology 101, and Philosophy 200 and then go back and sit down and think for himself.

She said she feels sorry for Michael Jackson due to his young age and all the pressures he is now undergoing, because of his success. He has a bodyguard and has no privacy. As for Brooke Shields, Miss Giovanni quipped, she is going to get FAT! (smiles)

She said that sororities should stop the petty bickering among themselves and work together for one common goal.

Another Giovanni quip: "Ronald Reagan is the most boring President I ever saw... If I can wear a Jimmy Carter peanut I can certainly wear a Jesse Jackson button... Not only is the campaign boring and the candidates are old and ugly, but not only is Jesse Jackson smart and keeps things alive but he is also the best looking one."

When asked if she was active in politics, she replied, "Yes, I'm active. I VOTE and that's something a lot of you don't do."

Miss Giovanni stirred up the consciences of all those who attended. Following her lecture and beautiful poetry reading she answered numerous questions that were thrown at her... never hesitant or faltering in her replies. She is a highly educated young mother of one son and has dedicated her life to the service of humanity. We, the members of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority are very proud to have her as our sister and we offer our sincerest thanks to the members of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority for inviting her to our town.
