

Successful Fundraiser Given For Frank Dix

The welcoming letter read: "It's good to see so many faces here for this dinner/fund raiser for Frank Dix. I am sure that all of you are well acquainted with Mr. Dix for he has been a Las Vegas resident for over 13 years. He moved to Las Vegas, first taking a job as a casino porter, later becoming a supervisor. He is the father of 10 children."

The occasion: A fund raiser for Frank Dix developed by his many friends and supporters. Said the organizers of the fund raiser, "Mr. Dix is suffering from a terminal disease which requires a special diet to sustain life. It is a costly obligation." So a group of individuals to include Dale Lewis, co-owner of the Big 8 Market; Maggie Morris, a cashier at the market; Herman Thrower, F. Browning and Jimmy Banks, co-owners of the Super 6 Market; Steve Porter, manager of Friendly Liquors; Joe Whalen of the Colony Club and Joe Jones, a close friend who lives with Frank Dix — all combined their energies to organize a fund raiser for Frank Dix. The food was donated by the Big 8 Market and the Super 6

Market.

A lovely affair was held Monday evening at the Friendly Liquors, corner "H" and Owens. The activity was well attended and supported.

Some of the hostesses included Maggie Morris, Lillie Freeman, Rochelle Robinson, Mary Cook Lewis, Eula Conway and Charlene Parker.

It was a heartwarming affair where the community rallied to aid Frank Dix at the time of need.

Frank Dix was never a happier man; he forgot at least for a moment, his troubled body.

Jesse Jackson to host show

NEW YORK — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who has spent plenty of time in the pulpit and on the campaign trail, will try his hand at another field — comedy.

The former Democratic presidential candidate will be host of NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live" on Oct. 20 the network announced Thursday.

During his appearance, Jackson will not comment on the ongoing presidential campaign.

Jackson will receive the standard fee for all "Saturday Night Live" hosts — $5,000.

Vo-Tech-Constructed House Still Looking For A Buyer

A house constructed by last year's carpentry class at Southern Nevada Vocational-Technical Center rests on its temporary foundation in the school's parking lot — unsold after two attempts this summer.

For the first time anyone can recall since the house became an annual project for Vo-Tech carpentry classes, there has not been any takers. With a new school year just underway, the challenge is to find a buyer, and soon!

"It's actually a fantastic bargain at a minimum bid price of only $21,800," says Vo-Tech principal Mario Monaco. "The house is built solid as a rock with extra everything, down to the plumbing and hand-finished cabinetry," he added. "I can't think of a wiser investment for someone looking to improve an undeveloped lot," said Monaco.

In accordance with state law, the house has to be sold at public auction. So, the Clark County School District is looking to make the third attempt a charm. Sept. 15, 9 a.m. is the new date to auction off the house, along with three 8x10 ft. storage sheds, also built by the carpentry students.

The three-bedroom, one and 3/4 bath house contains close to 1,300 sq. ft. of living space. The buyer is responsible for relocating the house to a permanent site. Proceeds from the sale of the house are already earmarked and badly needed to buy building supplies for this year's carpentry class.

Prospective bidders may inspect the house any weekday at Vo-Tech, 5710 Mountain Vista, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The front door key can be picked up in the principal's office.
