Council championship in 1978. He successfully defended it 16 times, a mark second only to the great Joe Louis. Included in that string are victories over Ken Norton, Earnie Shavers, Weaver, Muhammad Ali and Gerry Cooney.

In Smith, Holmes faces a young man with devastating power. Ranked No. 9 by the WBA and No. 11 by the IBF, the 29-year-old Smith has knocked out his last 10 opponents en route to a record of 14-1 with 12 knockouts. His lone loss came in his pro debut in 1981. But he's improved immensely since then as evidenced in his last outing, a knockout win over previously undefeated Frank Bruno on May 13 in London.

Smith, born in Magnolia, N.C., and a graduate of nearby Shaw University, didn't begin boxing until 1976 while he was in the Army. It was then during his amateur career, in which he went 35-4, he earned the nickname "Bonecrusher."

At 6-foot-4 inches and approximately 230 pounds, he is one inch taller and about 10 pounds heavier than Holmes. Smith also has a one-inch reach advantage on Holmes, 82 to 81.

Weaver, the WBA heavyweight champion from March, 1980, to Dec. 1982, is coming off an impressive seventh-round knockout of Billy Thomas on Aug. 31 at the Riviera. The 32-year-old Weaver, from Diamond Bar, Calif., has a record of 26-10-1 with 18 knockouts, including a knockout win over current WBA heavyweight champion Gerrie Coetzee. Weaver's currently ranked No. 1 by both the WBA and WBC. Anthony, from Detroit, has a record of 21-3.

Both Cobb and Berbick have fought Holmes for the WBC championship and gone the distance. The 29-year-old Cobb, from Orange, Texas, did it in 1982 and the 31-year-old Berbick, from Miami, Fla., did it in 1981.
