Spoon James, a returning senior, was asked if this team is having more fun this year. James kind of laughed. "Just listen," he said, pointing around the room. It's hard to imagine them having more than the last two years when they've racked up 28-3 and 29-6 records and two NCAA tournament bids. It's the way they're trying to win this year that's leaving everybody smiling and drooling with anticipation. "We're going to run, run and run," James said. It's not only the players who are anxious but also the fans, who are still clamoring for those days in the late 70s when they were the "Runnin'" Rebels and set all those NCAA scoring records.

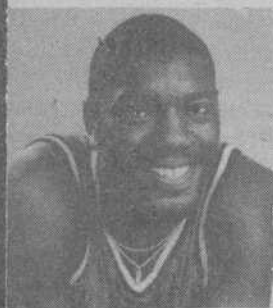

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, in his 12th year at UNLV, has down-played the Rebels' running prowess. Until now, Tarkanian has made a conscious effort to upgrade UNLV's running game. That's a challenge.

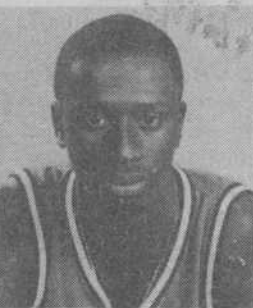

ARMON GILLIAM
