KEN'S COMMENTS

By Ken Wilson

Never mind all of the pre-game hype, Super Bowl XIX turned out to be just another false alarm.

After being billed as the greatest game of all time, featuring the organizations top two teams this season, the San Francisco 49ers demonstrated their superior talents by totally overwhelming the Miami Dolphins 38-16 in the National Football League finale.

For the second consecutive year, the build-up to a super clash became a daydream, as San Francisco manhandled Miami in every phase in much the same fashion as the Raiders disassembled the Redskins a year ago.

In earning the 1984-85 NFL crown, the 49ers displayed such versatility in whipping the Dolphins that the Bay area franchise has possibly earned a spot among the league's all-time elite.

San Francisco collected many records while completing the best-ever records in pro football, finishing with an 18-1 mark, as the season becomes an example of excellence while presently a case of true and total team effort.

Though the 49ers had many individual stand-out performances, the San Francisco defense was the backbone of the victory, while offensively running-back Roger Craig and field-general Joe Montana stepped to the forefront.

The 49er defense, employing a four-man front, put the clamps on the highly regarded Dolphin quarterback, Dan Marino, forcing the league's top thrower into hurried tosses and three interceptions, thus turning the one-dimensional Miami squad into history.

former, Craig scored three touchdowns on the ground while Montana, a Notre Dame product, pitched three TDs while connecting on 24 of 35 passes for 331 yards, and became only the third two-time Super Bowl Most Valuable Player.

The 49ers entered the game knowing that their only chance was to keep the ball out of the hands of the explosive Miami offense. However, in a tight opening stanza, there was no such luck.

However, the tide changed in the second period as the San Francisco defense gave the offense field position time and again as the 49ers capitalized, scoring 21 points to gain a commanding advantage that they would never give up.

structed by local resident and professional stunt woman, Barrie Bailey, will be offered at the West Las Vegas Library, 1402 "D" Street. The Saturday afternoon classes will meet at 3:30 p.m.

Designed to help improve posture, muscle tone, and relaxation, the one-hour workouts will also feature suggestions for weight-control through better nutrition.
