Rich Little, Nell Carter Set For MGM Show

LAS VEGAS, Nevada — Visitors to Las Vegas always get their money's worth when Rich Little is in town, since instead of seeing just one star, they are able to see as many as 50 — all on the same stage.

Perhaps the greatest impressionist who ever lived, Rich Little will be appearing in the beautiful Celebrity Room of the MGM Grand Hotel from Thursday, May 23, through June 5.

Appearing with Rich will be the entertaining Nell Carter, star of the television comedy "Gimme A Break."

Rich Little has been a very happy entertainer of late, since even President Reagan has told him that the best thing that ever happened to Little's career was Ronald Reagan being elected for four more years.

Little has performed his hilarious impression of a Reagan news conference before the president and was surprised and relieved to find that the president liked it.

In addition to being an entertainer of presidents, Little also has been a "bailer-out" for many a Hollywood studio.

He supplied the voice for the ailing David Niven in the last movie he made shortly before he died. More recently, Little has been the voice for Stacy Keach in the final "Mike Hammer" episodes, since Keach was languishing in an English jail as the result of a drug conviction.

So accurate are Little's impressions that a voice print was not able to tell the difference between Rich and the real Johnny Carson.

Among the big surprises to people who have not seen Rich Little perform before are his impressions of singers such as Frank Sinatra, Perry Como, Dean Martin, Robert Goulet, Tom Jones, and even Willie Nelson! Little not only can sing, he can sing quite well.
