

ΓΦΔ

(Continued from page 13.)

Elizabeth Garney, Co-founder of Gamma Phi Delta Sorority

Violet T. Lewis, Co-founder of Gamma Phi Delta Sorority

A group of sorors pose for a photograph during a gala party at Gamma Phi Delta International House in Detroit, Michigan.

literacy enhancement groups are working cooperatively under the umbrella of AOIP to deal effectively with the unique and unremediated root causes of illiteracy among Black Americans.

Gamma Phi Delta's time-honored and deeply-rooted commitment to the improvement of educational opportunities for Black youth has found a wellspring of new avenues in the tutorial aspects of the Assault On Illiteracy Program. At the same time AOIP's community-building thrust offers these women new possibilities for the fulfillment of the high ideals envisioned by their founders.

Having facilities like the Gamma Phi Delta International Headquarters permits these women to command control of such space for a variety of uplifting and community-building activities which help to eradicate the root cause of Black illiteracy, namely, poor self and community image.

Gamma Phi Delta Sorority, Inc. is looking forward to ever greater things. In the words of Dr. Bozeman, the Supreme Basileus, the sorors are:

Looking up to the heavens and to our God for strength and guidance. Through Him we can do all things. Our trained staff of dedicated women have the expertise to serve the sorority and its affiliates. Not only that, they are Christian women serving in community activities where they reside.

All over Gamma's Kingdom we have seen a mighty stir—a rededication to the goals of this great sisterhood. May our hearts burn with a better understanding of our duties and responsibilities to our youth. May we be bound together in a stronger bond of sisterhood and love, with a stronger sense of belonging....