

SWEARING IN — Yvonne Atkinson, a native Nevadan, is congratulated by Justice of the Peace Earle White following ceremonies to swear her in as the youngest school board member in the history of Clark County. On the board almost two months now, Ms. Atkinson is already making her mark as a capable addition to the seven-member school board. Her weekly column, "The Report Card" is a regular feature within the pages of the SENTINEL-VOICE.

Jury selection ready for OIC extortion trial

Jury selection was completed Monday in the conspiracy-extortion trial of former federal Economic Development Administration director Robert Hill.

Opening arguments in the case was scheduled for Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Lloyd George.

Hill, who was the EDA's Western regional director, is accused of receiving a $1,000 kickback from James Chaney, former executive director of the Las Vegas Opportunities Industrialization Center.

The heart of the government's case is expected to be built on Chaney's testimony. Chaney, who was the head of the Las Vegas poverty agency, pleaded guilty last week to federal charges of extortion and subornation of perjury and agreed to testify as a witness for the prosecution.

He is scheduled for sentencing July 26 and faces the possibility of a six-year prison term.

Hill and Chaney led a list of 11 defendants named in a 36-count indictment returned last December following a lengthy investigation by the FBI. The indictment charged the group with conspiring to divert $30,000 in federal funds earmarked for OIC into their own pockets.
