McKay showing wit in political life

CARSON CITY — Attorney General Brian McKay would rather not be a politician if he cannot sometimes make fun of his friends and foes.

In recent days, Republican McKay incurred the wrath of both Rep. Barbara Vucanovich and Gov. Richard Bryan.

He first accused members of fellow Republican Vucanovich's staff with suffering from "big mouth, small mind disease" by spreading rumors that he was a Democrat in college.

Then he contended Bryan "flip-flopped" on the nuclear waste repository issue. Bryan, possibly the chief critic of proposed Yucca Mountain repository, voted in favor of the repository in a 1975 legislative resolution.

Vucanovich moaned McKay was breaking Republican Party unity. McKay responded by saying his remarks should be taken with a grain of salt.

"I prefaced my remarks saying we all take ourselves too seriously. I like to poke fun. Sometimes I poke fun to send a message."
