Here she is receiving her initial introduction to the newspaper field. It was an overall orientation to the operations and management of the SENTINEL-VOICE.

Work in a newspaper camera room is another essential phase of the overall operation. Here she is shown with Betty Brown getting her initiation to the paper's mammoth camera.

Another one of the essential phases during the preparation of the newspaper is the assemblage of the news for its final step into the newspaper layout. Ed Brown is shown giving her the techniques.

All of the preparation elements are now meshed into the final stage before printing. Here Ed and Betty Brown give Annette Washington the final tuning step in laying out the paper.
