Black Beauty Queen Sues Farrah Fawcett

A former Miss Michigan who claims that actions by Farrah Fawcett caused her to be blacklisted from the television industry and fired from the hit TV series "Emergency" has sued the actress for $165 million.

Sonja Dunson, a Black beauty queen who enjoyed a successful movie and television career after studying at the Estell Harmon School of Acting, has filed a multi-million dollar lawsuit against actress Farrah Fawcett, Universal Studios and Mark VII Productions charging them with conspiracy to keep her from working as an actress because Fawcett thought Dunson was having an affair with Lee Majors, then Farrah's husband.

"Sonja and Lee, both former schoolteachers, had been friends for years before Majors and Fawcett were married," said a spokesman for Dunson. "Lee had only been married for about six months when Farrah became suspicious and was determined to put an end to the relationship."

from her television series and repeatedly slandered.

"The friendship between Lee and Sonja continued when both were working on the Universal Studios lot — Sonja in 'Emergency' and Majors in 'The Six Million Dollar Man,'" the spokesman added. "They would frequently have dinner together, and she would visit

Dunson's suit, which asks $165 million in damages from each defendant, also names Jacob Shearer, an agent for Mark VII Productions; his daughter, Hannah Shearer, agent Donna Dockstrader, Mark VII Limited and Universal, and charges that when she refused to stop associating with Majors she was fired

Lee in his dressing trailer during breaks." However, the spokesman insisted they were not romantically involved.

Dunson also charges that Jacob Shearer, alluding to the fact that Sammy Davis, Jr. wears a glass eye, once physically threatened Dunson, telling her: "The same thing that happened to

Storybook wedding for Ross Saturday

Wearing a white wedding gown with a trailing veil that included $12,000 worth of handmade Belgian lace, Diana Ross, 41, married Norwegian shipping tycoon Arne Naess, 47, Saturday in Switzerland's oldest church.

Gregory Peck and Stevie Wonder were spotted among the 200 guests attending the ceremony in the 10th-century Abbey of Romainmotier.

A Baptist minister married the couple, and a boys' choir sang. Ross' voluminous veil was carried by her three daughters from her first marriage and Naess' two children from his first marriage.

The newlyweds left the church through an honor arch of mountain picks, held by the mountain-climbing crew Naess led up Mount Everest. Ross and Naess kissed for photographers, then went to a private reception in Lausanne. Reports say they plan to honeymoon on Naess' 370-acre Pacific island.

Sammy Davis' eye could happen to you — or worse — if you continue your relationship with Majors."

Dunson claims that since 1974, she has been unable to get work as an actress. The suit continues: "She has not even been able to obtain an interview or audition through normal channels of casting roles for actresses or actors."

Dunson's spokesman said that because she couldn't get work, she decided to develop her own motion picture project, and began seeking prospective investors. "It was at that time that Sonja approached an investor who informed her that she was on an industry blacklist. She even got a letter from another executive producer who had accepted her property for funding, but who pulled out after learning she had been blacklisted. He notified Sonja by mail that because of the blacklist, he was pulling back."

Dunson claims that because of Farrah Fawcett's illegal actions, she has suffered for more than 11 years. "I had to give up a mansion and a Rolls Royce for a one-bedroom apartment and an old Plymouth," Dunson said. "My career has been ruined, I have been called every dirty name under the sun, and nobody seems to know anything about my situation."

"Because one paranoid woman thought I was having an affair with her husband, I have lost everything."
