handsome, suave and debonaire but they are also white. This is particularly true in those advertisements which are locally produced.

I can see it now. Some idiot is going to say that I'm prejudiced. How in the world can a person who has Africian, Chicasaw, Choctaw and Scotch-Irish ancestry be prejudiced? Frankly, I don't know and I wish I could say what Rhett said to Scarlett but I won't. On top of that, some of my best friends are white. There's nothing wrong with people who are white. There is something wrong with people who are one thing or another and think that there is something wrong with people who happen not to be the same one thing or another that they are. Now you've done it. You gotten even me confused. Don't worry about it right now. Worry about that tomorrow.

Unlike the person who can change the weight, a person cannot change the color. Some things cannot be changed. What can be changed is the look of some of the models. I'm sure that they can find some black guys who are slim and trim, suave and debonaire, of the same height and same weight and with the same marks of distinction. I'm certain that they can. Some of my best friend fit that description to a "T."

It doesn't affect me too much because my father is dead -- thank goodness. He doesn't have to put up with this crap anymore. Were he yet alive, those stores who are too ashamed of how he looked to have anyone who resembles him model their wares could forget about me as a customer during Father's Day spending spree time. They should definitely forget about me as a possible customer during the remainder of the time because my father taught me that I should like myself more than anyone else. That being the case, if I would not patronize those businesses for his sake then surely I would not demean myself by patronizing them for me.

As I've said time and time again: "Anyone who does so is subsidizing racism." You would still be amazed at how much you can save by not doing so. Let's take a bite out of unemployment. Let's let them know that if they do not hire us in their stores, their movie theaters, their fast food factories, their advertising agencies, their newspapers and all of the rest of those things which we've been supporting, that we are not going to spend our money there. Let's tell the Girl Scouts that if they want us to buy their cookies that some of those "Brownies" had better be that if we cannot work for them then we'd just as soon settle for the kidney stones and the rotten tasting coffee. If it were not for poor little Juan Valdez down in Colombia picking that coffee by hand I would give up coffee. When was the last time you saw a cocoa colored man selling cocoa? Sure, popcorn has got to be white but not all of the people who are selling it. I haven't seen a brown or tan or red or yellow butt in Jordache, on television, in my entire life. Have you?

We're becoming extinct. If we don't do something about it we're going to disappear.

Yes, quite a lot has happened in the last several weeks and it has all been the same as in any cluster of weeks we've ever had. Now

DUNCAN

Operation Life is able to provide low-income people with the types of services and medical care that "every other middle class American already enjoys," said Duncan.

Duncan is not satisfied with leaving things static: Her plans include building a $1.4 million senior citizen complex near the medical clinic and working harder to provide affordable housing for the needy.

"People are looking to be economically independent," she said. "They (low-income people) want to be looked at with respect as a community resource. They want jobs, they want businesses.

"We will not be left out."

is the time -- if ever there were a time. You've got the ball...

done by these "road bandits" in a largely agricultural and undeveloped country is sinful.

Since the country is struggling to stay solvent with several major opportunities in underdeveloped mineral and mining resources it is to South Africa's advantage to keep Mozambique indigenous. Nevertheless, Mozambique has reduced its illiteracy rate from 93 percent at the time of the end of colonial rule, June 25, 1975, down to 83 percent today with minimal outside aid and hired murderers within its midst. Mozambique people according to ambassador Ferrao "after ten years took the power and are not going to give it back, but share it with (all) the people.
