

RJR pledge $50,000 to NAACP

BALTIMORE — To assist America's oldest civil rights organization in financing a new headquarters, RJR Nabisco, Inc. recently pledged $50,000 toward the NAACP's relocation from New York City to Baltimore.

Escalating rent and the need for larger facilities motivated the NAACP, which had been based in New York since 1909, to construct a new building in Baltimore this year. The new headquarters will house staff offices, a conference center, and a National Civil Rights Library and Archives.

RJR Nabisco recently paid $25,000 of its $50,000 pledge to the NAACP building fund campaign, in addition to making a 1986 contribution of $30,000 to the NAACP's Special Contribution Fund. The Special Fund supports national programs such as educational assistance, voter registration and education, affirmative action and minority enterprise, legal defense and family services.

RJR Nabisco presented NAACP with two checks totaling $55,000 at NAACP's recent annual convention in Baltimore. Marshall B. Bass, senior vice president of RJR Nabisco, said, "The NAACP has helped eliminate discrimination in housing, schools, workplaces and the courts. The NAACP strives to obliterate the vicious poverty cycle and the plague of unemployment. And the NAACP seeks an even broader goal — to eliminate racial prejudice, combat indifference, and help awaken humanity. The NAACP moves this country toward achieving the principles of democracy and opportunity upon which the nation was founded."

In accepting the RJR Nabisco contributions, Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, said, "You know this is appreciated. The statistics covering Black Americans in employment, education and housing — to identify but a few of the crucial areas of concern — are so overwhelmingly bleak that they demand an era of unprecedented commitment and activity."

RJR Nabisco, an international consumer products corporation with headquarters in Winston-Salem, N.C., is the parent company of Nabisco Brands, Inc. (foods and beverages); R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International, Inc.; Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp.; Heublein Inc. (spirits, wines and imported beers); and RJR Archer, Inc. (packaging).

Community College has a comprehensive program suited to those interested in improving reading, writing, math and/or study skills.

The Reading Program offers the opportunity to develop reading skills to meet the demands of college level studies, upgrade job performance, and fully enjoy the benefits of recreational reading.

Anyone interested in further developing writing abilities in the areas of grammar, spelling, punctuation, paragraph organization, and essay writing will find the Center's Writing Skills Program most beneficial.

If improving learning efficiency is the goal, the Study Skills Program should be considered. In this program, survival skills for college courses as well as the world of work are taught.

Pepsi-Cola Minority Intern Program Opening Doors To the Business World

Roger Enrico, president and chief executive officer of the Pepsi-Cola Company (center), recently participated in a three-day conference for the company's summer minority interns. Now in its fourth year, the Pepsi-Cola Minority Intern Program has nearly 70 participants this summer who are working at Pepsi-Cola operations throughout the country.

More important among these skills are managing time, setting goals, focusing attention, listening with comprehension, taking useful notes, getting the most from textbooks, using fail-safe memory techniques, improving reading speed, and doing research papers. Such skills help one to become a more efficient, independent, and successful learner. These skills are the keys that enhance success in life.

For those who have not obtained a high school degree, Clark County Community College's GED program has the answer. A free pre-test is given to determine the capability of taking the GED test itself. If the results indicate there exists a need for further preparation, the special GED program in grammar, reading, and math will be available.

Finally, Clark County Community College offers the English speaking and writing proficiency. At the lower and intermediate levels, emphasis is placed on the development of listening, speaking, reading, and writing. At the advanced level, the focus is on the development of writing skills
