Football this week

By William Ramirez

Prep Football

Well here we are six weeks into the season and the top team in the Southern AAA Conference isn't Bishop Gorman, no not Rancho, not Chaparral either... it's Bonanza. The Bengals, 6-0, continued their winning ways last Friday with a non-division win over Rancho 17-16.

You can count on you hand the number of wins Bonanza has had in the past three years, this year the Bengals are the only undefeated team six weeks into the season. With three weeks left in the season Bonanza will face Valley (this Friday at Bonanza, 7:30p.m.), Chaparral and Clark.

In other games last Friday Eldorado blanked Las Vegas 21-0; Valley squeaked by Chaparral 15-13; Western defeated Basic 21-0 and Gorman edged out Clark 10-6.

Other games this week include Western at Rancho 3:30p.m.; Eldorado v. Gorman at Silver Bowl 7:30p.m.; Las Vegas at Basic 7:30p.m. and Chaparral at Clark 8:00p.m.

The Angel Planes Fly For Your Life

There is an organization flying for your life — The Angel Planes.

The Angel Planes, a nationwide charity headquartered in Southern Nevada, is made up of volunteer pilots. The Angel Planes fly blood for health care agencies, donor organs for transplant and the medically indigent to the treatment centers not available in their community. There is no charge whatsoever for these services. These free services are provided by pilots who have a love for flying and a love of mankind.

The primary objective of The Angel Planes is to service to needs of our communities. The goal is to continue expanding the nationwide network of squadrons to provide that service. Hospitals, blood banks and nonprofit organizations are all enthusiastic about America's Angel Planes and urge expansion of the service.

The Angel Plane Air Festival to be held Oct. 17 & 18 at Sky Harbor Airfield in Henderson will provide the proceeds to help expand the organization so that it can continue its life saving missions.

Las Vegas' most unique outdoor event yet will be the Angel Plane Air Festival '87.

THIRD ANNUAL ARTHUR ASHE TENNIS TOURNAMENT OCTOBER 24

GARY, Ind. — Past participants have included the likes of Ebony magazine senior editor-historian Lerone Bennett, former Miss America Vanessa Williams, tennis legend Althea Gibson, activist Kwame Toure (formerly Stokely Carmichael) and the first black to win the prestigious Wimbledon championship, Arthur Ashe.

This year, the focus is on sports superstars, as well as entertainment greats, when the 3rd annual Arthur Ashe Celebrity Pro-Am Tennis Tournament is held at the newly constructed Hudson-Campbell Sports and Fitness Center in Gary, Indiana.

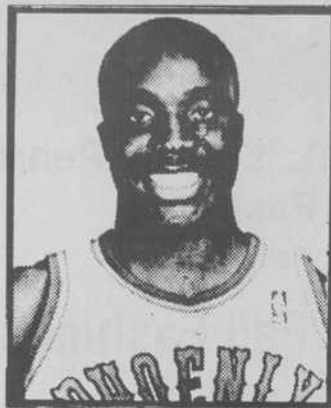

Organizer Carlos Tolliver said, "This year we want to feature the usual array of civic, social and entertainment personalities. But for an added twist, we particularly hope to attract Black Hall of Famers in baseball, football and basketball, as well as some of their contemporaries still playing the games."

The tournament is an annual fund-raiser for the National Civil Rights museum and Hall of Fame to be constructed in Gary, Indiana. Only last week, a telethon to benefit the project netted some $947,000 in pledges and actual donations. The telethon — which featured Jerry Butler, Nancy Wilson, Ramsey Lewis and Thelma Houston — was broadcast into some 10 million households across the nation via Black Entertainment Television (BET).

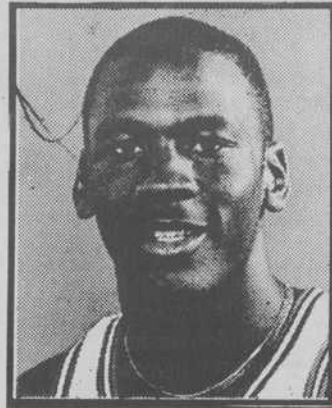

Mayor Richard G. Hatcher, national chairman of the board for the Museum and Hall of Fame, credited black newspapers and radio stations across the country for playing a major role in the success of the telethon. He added that the tennis tournament will be an opportunity for some of the greatest names in sports, entertainment, business and government to come together for an
