Free Medical Screening For Residents in Two Medically Underserved and Economically Depressed Mississippi Counties

by Joseph Delaney
NNPA News Release

TUNICA, Mississippi — Residents in two of Mississippi' medically underserved and economically depressed counties, Tunica and Marshall, received free medical screening from doctors associated with the National Medical Association in November.

NMA, which represents nearly all of the country's 16,000 Black physicians, expected to screen 1,000 citizens in each county. This is the first time that NMA has sponsored a health screening program in Mississippi. The screening was sponsored by NMA and North Mississippi Rural Legal Services.

Explaining the purpose of the screening project, NMA's president, Dr. John E. Joyner, declares: "There is a great emphasis on hunger and poverty in the third world, but we do not seem to recognize and realize that we have these problems here at home. I am strongly concerned that we should be addressing our own needs much closer to us."

"I want to make sure that we begin to address these (health) problems and dig in and do something concrete with the problems that we face," added the Indianapolis based neurosurgeon who was recently elected president of the NMA.

Poor medical services are commonplace in both communities. The counties do not have obstetrical or gynecological services. The lack of these services has created problems for women who must travel great distances to have children. Poverty is also a serious matter. In Tunica, the poorest country in the nation, 52.9 percent of the residents have incomes below poverty level. In Marshall, 31.9 percent of the citizens have incomes below poverty level.

Health providers and community leaders from Tunica and Marshall counties met separately with representatives from the Department of Health and Human Services during the screening to discuss how to address health problems in both communities.

Tunica and Marshall citizens were screened for high blood pressure and hypertension, diabetes, and cholesterol level. They also received visual and auditory examinations.

The screening took place on November 21 in Tunica County and November 22 in Marshall County.

FAMILY REUNIONS: HOW TO PLAN YOURS

By Harry McKinzie, 1987
301 p. pa. $16.95

If you're planning a family reunion, Harry McKinzie will guide you from the first letter to the family generating support and enthusiasm to the last thank you note to all those committee members who shared their talents and energies to make everything happen. He'll help you keep on communicating with those family members in the easiest, most inexpensive way possible. You'll learn how to organize committees and select chairpersons, and your committees will know how to do their work with ease and efficiency. Transportation problems will disappear as if by magic; everyone will arrive to savor the food the family particularly enjoys which somehow got there piping hot and delicious. They'll be royally entertained at all the family gatherings, and have an array of interesting activities to select from for all their leisure moments. All of this will happen due to the careful attention to detail given by you and your co-workers after receiving inspiration and direction from this new book.

And, if you were not thinking of having a reunion, you may change your mind after reading McKinzie's section on Family Roles and the extreme importance of strong families guided by renewed moral values. To him, the only way to save the world from its careening course toward disaster is through countries composed of strong value-driven family units. And much of the strength is gained from a united, active extended family, this unity to be achieved through, you guessed it, the family reunion. McKenzie has lots of ideas on how the extended family can act together and build and maintain strength through unity.

Much of what he has to say is thought-provoking and controversial. His ideas on how family members should
