

Nunnely to Oversee Minority Student Programs at UNLV

Wayne Nunnely, former head football coach at UNLV, has been named director of minority student programs at the university, according to Robert Ackerman, vice president for student services.

Nunnely, who coached the Rebels football team during the 1986-89 seasons, will be responsible for developing, administering and managing a comprehensive program aimed at recruiting and retaining minority students at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Ackerman said.

"We are trying to respond to the needs of minority students," the vice president said. "I see Wayne as a tremendous role model for all of our students, but particularly for minority students. The opportunity to provide such a positive role model is something I am very pleased about."

"I'm excited to be remaining at UNLV in the capacity of director of minority student programs," Nunnely said. "I'm looking forward to working with all the minority students at UNLV."

Nunnely's office will be located in the Student Development Center in James R. Dickinson Library, along with other student development offices.

"Wayne's longtime interest at the university has been in athletics, so he will hold a collateral appointment with the athletic director with responsibility for the Letterman's Club," Ackerman said.

As director of minority student programs, Nunnely will develop programs to provide financial, academic and personal counseling for minority students. He will also plan and carry out recruitment strategies for minority students, coordinating this effort with the Admissions, Academic Advancement, Student Financial Services, and Student Support Services offices at UNLV.
