

"Make a statement."

"My parents taught me well. They cut a lot of corners so I could get a college education. They're proud that I chose a car that makes a lot of sense.

My new Cavalier. The price was right; so was the mileage. But I wanted more than just an economy car. I just started my first 'real job.' So I wanted my first new car to make a statement. You know what I'm saying? It's not enough to be smart; you got to look smart, too."

When it comes to looking smart, nobody's winning like The Heartbeat of America.
