VOTING POWER MADE PUBLIC

On Tuesday, June 4, 1991, the voters of Clark County made a liar out of the Political Propitators, those who proclaim to be foretellers of how the public will vote in any given election.

For the twenty one years that I have resided in Clark County, it has generally been believed by some that many blacks were not registered to vote and those who were registered would refuse to vote on election day.

The June 4, election proved that these political crystal ball gazers are wrong when they attempt to predict what the voters would do.

The two foretellers most prominently mentioned are Clark

County Register of Voters and the Review Journal. Both of the organizations had stated publicly and with a degree of certainty that no more than 20% of the voters would go to the polls on election day and vote.

When the dust was settled both had been proven wrong and has to eat crow! Consequently as a result of this gross miscalculation the "Voters had made their Voting Power Public." The R.J. said from its Editorial Page that the reason why the voter turnout in Ward One would be low is because neither of the candidates was worthy to be elected. This kind of a brazen assertion was tantamount or equal to telling the voting public they might as well stay at home and not vote.

John Q. Public ignored this silly advise and went to the polls and voted not 20% but 35% county wide and 52% in Ward One. That's Black & White power Working Together. As a result of this historical event, this writer is now basking in a state of ec-
