BASEBALL:

The Minnesota Twins won the World Series on a 1-0 victory over the Amazing Atlanta Braves. The 1991 World Series was the closest ever: Four games were decided in the last at bat, four games were decided in the final inning, three games went into extra innings, all games were won by the home team, and it was the first extra inning Game 7 since 1924.

The season opened with the Twins at 100-1 odds to win the World Series, while the Braves were at 250-1 odds. Local and Statewide sportsbooks stand to lose an estimated $10-$12 million dollars to bettors that invested at the beginning of the season. Both teams were in last place in their respective leagues last season.

THE FORMER REBEL STAR INKS SIX YEAR DEAL

Johnson Ready To Begin Season With Hornets

The NBA's No.1 draft pick Larry Johnson has finally come to terms with the Charlotte Hornets, team officials said in a Wednesday press conference.

The former UNLV Runnin' Rebel All-American inked a six-year contract worth a guaranteed $3.3 million a year through the 1996-97 season, with the first year worth $1.95 million.

"I'm ready to play," Johnson said while adding, "Nothing has been as terrible as waiting to do to camp."

Johnson missed the entire pre-season while his Dallas-based agent, Steve Endicott, tried to work out a deal with the Hornets.

Charlotte opens their regular season Friday against Boston.

Celtics Release Hunt

Former UNLV guard Anderson Hunt was released by the Boston Celtics Wednesday, just two days before the NBA season was scheduled to begin.

Hunt, a free-agent, who opted to give up his senior season at UNLV to turn pro, was let go by Boston along with two other free agents.

UNLV Head Coach Jerry Tarkanian, who would have built this years squad around Hunt, was very disappointed by the news. "I knew this would happen. Whoever told him to go hardship ought to be shot."

Hunt, the 1989-90 Final Four MVP, was the only Rebel starter not selected in this past summer's NBA draft.

Campus Police Tape Rebel Conditioning Classes

David Hollenbeck, the UNLV chief of police, has stated that he was the one responsible for taping the UNLV basketball team's conditioning classes to see if the Rebels had violated NCAA rules by practicing before October 15. However, Hollenbeck said that he was asked only to check on the Rebels, not to film them. Hollenbeck reportedly taped the team for two weeks of the conditioning class, which was headed by UNLV assistant coach Tim Grgurich, at the request of UNLV council Brad Booke.

Booke initially would not confirm or deny the taping, saying only that they knew of no major NCAA problems with the Rebel's conditioning class. He later confirmed the taping saying it was an "unusual compliance measure."

UNLV interim athletic director, Dennis Finfrok would not comment on the issue, but sources have said he did not initiate the idea.

Grgurich, who called the incidents, "outrageous and disgraceful behavior," was hoping for an independent investigation into the tapings, and stated that he is considering filing suit against the university. Grgurich has also claimed that he was tailed by a television station last summer, as well as having his mail screened. He and his attorney, Roy Smith, have yet to file the lawsuit, but Smith said he was studying the issue of whether privacy rights were violated.
